"The Nile is settled"

In 1863, John Hanning Speke sent a celebrated telegram from Khartoum to the Royal Geographical Society, and the expectant western world, that the question of the Nile was settled. He had previously asserted, on a hunch, that the lake he named Lake Victoria in 1858 was indeed the Source of the Nile. His claims were made more compelling by his second exploratory journey in 1860 which brought him to the exact spot of the Speke Monument at Living Waters Resort on 28 July 1862 and led him further down the Nile to Khartoum from where the telegram was sent. His hunch proved to be right.

Historical Speke Monument
(1862)

Living Waters Resort at the Source of the Nile is a ten acre paradise nestled at the exact spot where the beautiful Lake Victoria births the mighty Nile and sends it on its way to the Mediterranean Sea.

From pre-historic times to ancient Egyptian folklore, the Nile and its Source have held a sacred and communal significance for peoples far and wide. It provided a livelihood for fishermen and farmers, inspiration for storytellers and musicians, and sacred ground for kings and warrior's rituals – a life blood for all peoples who found their home by its lush banks.
